Professor Dorian Haskard practised for many years as a Consultant Rheumatologist at the Hammersmith Hospital in London. In parallel, he pursued an academic career as Professor of Cardiovascular Medicine and Rheumatology at Imperial College London, researching the cell and molecular bases of heart attacks and strokes and other cardiovascular problems in rheumatic diseases. He is now an Emeritus Professor at Imperial College, a British Heart Foundation Emeritus Professor and a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, the Linnean Society of London and the Academy of Medical Sciences. His recent book "The Gout: A Medical Microcosm in a Changing World" explores the scientific advancements over some three hundred and fifty years that separated the broad concept of "The Gout" into well-understood diseases.
